

GREECE PREPARED TO GO TO WAR WITH TURKEY
HER FOREIGN MINISTER TELLS CORRESPONDENTS

Former Georgian Is Working to Save Captives

EXPECTED TO ACT
AS INTERMEDIARY
FOR BIG POWERS

Roy Anderson, Former Emory Man, Has Already Made Visit to Camp of Chinese Bandits.

DESCRIBES CONDITIONS
IN THEIR STRONGHOLD

Says Their Numbers Have Been Swelled by Reinforcements—China Is Powerless to Act.

Washington, May 21.—There is a strong probability that Roy Anderson, a graduate of Emory university, will be the choice of the United States government and the great powers to act as plenipotentiary and intermediary between the governments and the bandits of northern China.

The singular distinction of acting in this matter of the greatest international import and one which is the center of universal interest in the chancelleries of the world comes to the Georgia man, who has been in the Orient for a considerable time, where he acted on behalf of various large American interests.

According to dispatches from Peking, Anderson has just returned from a visit to the bandit stronghold and has given the first graphic description of the condition of the prisoners over whose lot the world is spending some anxious hours and whose ultimate fate may again plunge the great powers into the horrors of a new frightful war.

Direct Negotiations.

Direct negotiations between the foreign powers and the Chinese bandits are likely to begin within forty-eight hours. This is the only course that promises to save the lives of the Americans and other foreigners which have been in the balance as the expiration of the bandits' ultimatum draws near.

There is visible uneasiness at the state department. Officials fear to make any move, lest the perilous position of the captives be made fatal. One untoward step at this critical moment might result in the instant murder of the prisoners.

Pressure on the state department for aggressive action is growing stronger. It has been intensified by the threat of the bandits to kill at least two of their captives, unless the Chinese government troops are withdrawn by Tuesday.

Tries to Maintain Calm.

Secretary Hughes is trying to maintain calm in the face of this growing pressure. Government officials are annoyed at suggestions that American troops be sent in. Such action would anger the bandits and perhaps result in wholesale slaying of the entire prisoner band.

The course most favored here is that forecast by the United News Sunday night—direct negotiations with the bandits. This action was recommended to the department Monday in an official cable from Peking. Further negotiations between the Chinese government and bandits are futile, the dispatch stated. Roy Anderson, an American business man of

BEAUTY OF FILM
WORLD WILL TRY
MATRIMONY AGAIN

Atlantic City, May 21.—Katherine MacDonald, famous screen beauty, will take to herself another husband. She is to become the bride of Charles Schoen Johnson, Philadelphia millionaire manufacturer, Tuesday afternoon. The wedding will take place at the home of Johnson's stepfather. The license was taken out Monday.

Miss MacDonald's first husband was Malcom Strauss, portrait painter, who met her while she was playing in the Winter Garden chorus in New York in 1916. They were later divorced.

BRITAIN PREPARES
TO SEND CRUISERS
TO RUSS WATERS

Labor Organ in London Reports That Four Cruisers and Seven Mine Sweepers Will Be Dispatched.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

London, May 21.—Preparations are in progress at Chatham and Portsmouth for the immediate dispatch of light cruisers and mine sweepers to Russian waters, according to The Daily Herald (labor organ), which specifies four cruisers and seven sweepers which have thus been detailed for Russian northern waters. It also asserts there have been significant movements of British war ships in the Mediterranean this week toward the Dardanelles, "possibly en route to the Black sea."

The paper declares Great Britain is preparing for something more than a diplomatic rupture with Russia.

No confirmation of The Daily Herald's statement regarding the movements of British war ships has been obtained elsewhere. The Herald has been making an ardent pro-bolshevik campaign in connection with Lord Curzon's recent note to the Russian Soviet.

Demands of England.

Moscow, May 21.—Three points whose fulfillment Lord Curzon demanded of Russia in his talk with Leonid Krassin were outlined as follows by the semi-official Rosta here Monday:

1. Withdrawal of Rasoknikov and Shumansky, soviet agents in Persia.
2. Withdrawal of Russia's curfew law to England.
3. Compensation of British subjects imprisoned by Russia without reciprocal compensation for Russian subjects held by Great Britain.

The impression is given in official circles that Russia, desiring to avoid a break with England, is willing to go to any possible limit to give a satisfactory answer to Lord Curzon by Wednesday, when the extended time limit on the British ultimatum expires.

The possibility of Lord Curzon succeeding Bonar Law as premier of England is causing consternation in Moscow because of the stern attitude he assumed toward Krassin.

Bore Banker Three Children, Says Woman in the Stillman Case.

New York, May 21.—A greater tragedy in the secret life of Florence Leeds and James A. Stillman than the world had previously suspected has been bared with the information that the little Irish girl has borne the banker not one, but three children.

Living a life of seclusion with Stillman, kept, she says, in the background of his life and denied the gaiety, luxuries and presents he is reported to have showered upon his friends, Mrs. Leeds had three children by him between 1916 and 1920.

Little Jay, eldest of the three, is the only one that lived. Jay, now in his fifth year, was born September

MALONEY REPORTS
HORRIBLE STORY
OF INCARCERATION

Weak From Loss of Food and Water, Believes He Can Identify Kidnapers on Sight.

HELD IN BOOTLEGGER'S
HOUSE FOR TWO WEEKS

Threatened With Death Twice and Deposited on Own Front Porch Monday Morning.

An investigation into the alleged abduction of J. A. Maloney, Kirkwood contractor, who claims he was kidnapped and incarcerated in a "bootlegger's den," two weeks ago, and who was delivered to the very door of his own home at 12 Trotti street, at an early hour Monday morning, was launched by Captain T. A. Sturdivant, of the plainclothes squad, a few hours after Maloney's appearance.

Mr. Maloney is unable to relate his unusual adventures in coherent fashion, being only capable of giving details concerning instances when he was admitted to the light or "blind-fold" was removed from his eyes. With every available clue the authorities began the search Monday, but at a late hour no steps toward arrest or progress in the case had been effected.

No Motive Given. Declaring that he could give no motive for his imprisonment other than his abductors had mistaken him for another, and attributing his sudden release solely to the finding of a fraternity symbol, in the lapel of his coat, Mr. Maloney gave as best he could the history of his hectic experience to the city plainclothes men.

He stated that on several occasions he had begged for release but had been refused, in addition to receiving innumerable threats against his life. Saturday night, he believes, one of the men, with whom he was talking, noticed the fraternity button and for the first time since his incarceration hope was given him of freedom. This man declared himself willing to do his best to release Maloney.

Didn't Know Whereabouts.

Mr. Maloney is unable to account for his whereabouts for the past two weeks, other than he had been imprisoned in a dark cellar, which he believes to be within the limits of Atlanta. The abduction, he claims, was affected by three masked men who forced him into an underground room, where he was kept with little food and drink for two weeks.

The theory that robbery may have been the motive has been discarded by Mr. Maloney. He declared that had that alone been the incentive for his abduction, he would not have been tortured, imprisoned and constantly threatened with death. A valuable watch and $200 in cash were missing

DEFIANT ANSWER
SENT TO RUSSIA

Has Better Right to Question Treatment of Its Subjects Than to Apologize for Assassination.

Geneva, May 21.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Swiss government reply to the soviet note of protest concerning the assassination at Lausanne of Vorovsky, soviet envoy, declares that Switzerland has a better right to demand explanations for the violence suffered by thousands of Swiss in Russia under the soviet regime than to give them regarding the death of one Russian who was an unofficial and unwelcome visitor. The reply, which was drafted by M. Motta, chief of the political department, has been approved by the federal council.

In regard to charges that Vorovsky was not sufficiently protected, the reply asserts that the Swiss police cannot give special supervision for the protection of every visitor to the country. It concludes with the statement that the trial of Maurice Conrad, who shot Vorovsky, will be held in due Swiss legal form and that foreign interference will not be tolerated.

JOINT COMMITTEE WILL INVESTIGATE
PARK BOND ISSUE

Matter Referred to the Finance and Park Committees at Council Meeting Monday.

The resolution offered in city council by Alderman J. L. McLendon, providing for a special referendum at which the voters of Atlanta would be given the opportunity to approve or reject the proposed $2,000,000 bond issue for a central park, together with an amendment submitted by Councilman Harry York recommending certain important changes in the original proposal, will be thoroughly investigated by the finance and park committees of council, at a meeting next Monday, it was voted by council Monday afternoon.

Decision of council in referring the park bond issue met with general approval of delegations from the Atlanta real estate board, the woman's club and other civic organizations, which thronged the council chamber. These organizations which are actively supporting the park project, announce they will be represented at the joint committee meeting and urge approval of the project.

Resolution referred.

After council had voted to refer the resolution and amendment to the joint committee for investigation, Alderman McLendon made a motion that the matter be reconsidered and that council take action on the resolution immediately. This motion was lost when a majority of members voted against it.

Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, one of the opponents of the measure, was prepared to call council's attention to section 9, of an act of 1920, which provides that no project of such nature could be definitely acted upon by council until the city planning commission had first considered it. City Attorney James L. Mayson, however, declared that this act did not touch upon matters similar to that of the central park bond issue.

Brown Approves Action. George M. Brown, Jr., president of the real estate board, declared the action of council met with the approval of the realtors and that except for a delay of two weeks, he was convinced that the project would be overwhelmingly approved by council at its next session and also by the voters at the polls.

Called Slight Delay.

"Friends of the central park movement look upon the action of council Monday afternoon merely as a slight delay," said Mr. Brown. "If council members consider it wise to refer it back to the committee for further investigation, that is satisfactory to us because the more they investigate it the more they will be convinced of its merits."

BAR PRIZE FIGHTS
WHEN ELKS GATHER
HERE WEEK JULY 9

City Council Prohibits the Staging of Bouts in Ordinance Introduced by R. A. Gordon.

GREB-SMITH BATTLE
CANNOT BE HELD HERE

Elks Officials Favor Action—Ordinance Is Only Effective During Convention Week.

There will be no prize fights in the corporate limits of Atlanta during the week of July 9 when the national convention of Elks assemblies here, it was decided Monday afternoon by city council in unanimously adopting an ordinance by Mayor Pro Tem R. A. Gordon, prohibiting the staging of prize, cock or bull fights here that week.

Fight Prohibited Here.

As a result of council's action, the scheduled championship bout between Harry Greb and Jeff Smith, announcement of which has been occupying the attention of local prize ring lovers for some time, will not be permitted in Atlanta.

Alderman Gordon, leading Atlanta Elks and a member of the national executive committee of that organization, recently attended a meeting of the grand lodge in Philadelphia and declared the sentiment of ranking officials was decidedly against the staging of any boxing contests during the convention here.

Thousands Here.

"It is simply a question of whether Atlanta will entertain thousands of Elks from all sections of the continent, or stage a prize fight," declared Mr. Gordon. "A number of officials of the grand lodge have stated they would oppose holding the convention here if the fight was permitted. At its session last Saturday night, the Atlanta lodge adopted resolutions calling upon council to prevent prize fighting, cock fighting or bull fighting in the city during the week of the Elks' convention."

The ordinance does not abolish boxing contests or prize fights in Atlanta for all time, but specifies that during the week of July 9 to 15 no fights will be staged here.

RULING REVOKED
ON DIVIDEND TAX

Treasury Decides Not to Exempt From Taxation Corporation Dividends Out of Profit Earnings.

Washington, May 21.—The treasury today revoked its decision of two weeks ago declaring exempt from income taxation corporation dividends distributed out of profits or earnings accrued prior to March 1, 1923. The ruling, officials said, would have resulted in the refunding of many million dollars in taxes.

No reason was given for rescinding the previous action, although at the office of Solicitor Hartson, of the revenue bureau, it was indicated that some explanation might be made later.

There were reports that the original decision amending the revenue regulations had resulted from a ruling on one particular case and that a review of that case had convinced revenue officials that no general application of the determination should have been made.

The amended regulation, now revoked, would have made it possible for many large corporations to present claims for tax refunds which they have been forced to pay since the income tax law became effective. It would have applied largely to corporations which drew income accrued by their subsidiaries prior to March 1, 1913, and which they in turn had distributed to stockholders of the parent corporation.

PRICE IS ELECTED
PURCHASING AGENT
BY SMALL MARGIN

Defeats J. N. Landers, the Present Holder of Office, by Only Three Votes.

Election of W. P. Price as city purchasing agent to succeed J. N. Landers, and appointment of a special councilman committee to consider the petition of the Georgia Railway & Power company, containing extensive plans for improving local transportation facilities, were important matters acted upon by city council at its session Monday afternoon.

Mr. Price's election was attained by the narrow margin of only three votes, the count being Price 18 and Landers 15, three members of council being absent. Each candidate for the office had claimed sufficient votes in council to insure his election and had the entire 36 members of council been present Mr. Landers declared the election would have resulted in tie vote.

Petition Read.

After the petition of the Georgia Railway & Power company, which outlined a constructive program for solving Atlanta's present and future transportation problems, was read, it was unanimously decided to refer it to a special committee consisting of Alderman I. N. Ragsdale, Alderman J. R. Carpenter, Alderman J. R. Bachman, Councilman J. L. Wells and Councilman W. C. Jenkins. This committee will hold a special session within the next few days and investigate the power company's plans, reporting back to council at its next session.

Other matters acted upon by council at the same session included: Adoption of an amendment to the city ordinance passed recently which specified the kind of indemnity bond acceptable to the city from jitney drivers; the tabling of an ordinance introduced by Alderman Jesse W. Armstrong, providing for a repeal of the city ordinance; passage of an ordinance by Alderman W. B. Hartsfield providing that all vegetables and produce likely to attract flies and other insects in carts or in stores, be screened.

Vote Outlined. The vote for purchasing agent was as follows: For Price, (18), Aldermen Gordon, Hartsfield, Armstrong, Buchanan, Williamson, Councilmen Pennington, Beall, Woodall, Baker, York, Jenkins, Wells, Russell, Knight, Cooper, Olson, Johnson and Gifford.

GERMAN LEADERS OF BUSINESS WILL
BACK PEACE OFFER

Industrial Heads Will Do Their Best to Bring About a Settlement of Ruhr Difficulties.

NEW NOTE OF ALLIES
EXPECTED SATURDAY

Thyssen Declares That Offer Will Not Be More Than Thirty Billion Gold Marks.

BY FERDINAND JAHN.

Berlin, May 21.—German industrial leaders, according to Fritz Thyssen, one of the most prominent of their number in the Ruhr, will get behind the next government reparations offer with definite assurances of guarantees.

Though Chancellor Cuno was enjoying a holiday at Hamburg and other members of the government were resting, the belief prevailed that a new German reparations note would be drafted by Saturday. Meantime Thyssen, in an interview with the United News, set forth the position of his powerful associates on the eve of the next offer toward peace.

"The big industrialists," he said, "will support the government and assist in giving adequate guarantees for reparations. The industrialists do not desire to have it said of them that they sabotaged the situation and stabbed the country in the back."

Believes Figure High.

Thyssen believes, the same as many of the industrialists, that a thirty-billion mark reparations figure is excessively high, but he asserted the new offer at least would not be more than thirty billion.

Then, going into general conditions in Germany, Thyssen manifested some uneasiness at the activities of the communists in the Ruhr. He appeared to see a possibility of bolshevism breaking out but clearly indicated he wasn't the "red" spectre as an immediate danger.

"The strikes in the Ruhr," he said, "are fomented by communists. Naturally it is difficult to say what may come but I can tell you, as I have before, that passive resistance is continuing and we have no desire to settle it before the prospects of a settlement are in sight."

"Of course we desire to see an end of such conditions if it is possible to attain one and when I speak of a bolshevist danger I merely mean that such a thing can come to pass. You will recall that back in 1914 nobody thought such a big war could come but it did. Likewise nobody foresaw that the bolshevist danger could spread throughout Russia—but it did."

Behavior Remarkable.

"On the other hand, I must say that I think the behavior of our people in the Ruhr has been remarkable. In what other land in the world

Why the Weather?

DR. CHARLES F. BROOKS,
Secretary American Meteorological
Society, says:

Most Fogs Are in Spring.

Fog is nothing more than a cloud formed at the earth's surface, touching the sea or ground. Seldom is it more than 200 feet in thickness. Like the cloud it results from the temperature of the air falling below the dew-point, which is the temperature at which air in cooling is no longer able to contain all of its moisture in the vapor state. The moisture condenses on the particles of dust which are always present in the atmosphere.

The usual fog of the Great Lakes in spring are caused when warm, humid air floats over the cool surface, and loses heat to the water and further lowers its temperature by mixing with the colder air which it replaces. The most striking example, of course, is where the warm air from over the Gulf stream drift across the Labrador current.

But the Great Lakes can do nearly as well. A balmy breeze from the south becomes chilled to moderate height in passing over the icy water. This makes a fog in which vessels may grope their way, though an observer on a Michigan sand dune could direct their movements, so sharp may the fog top be, no higher than the tops of the funnels.

READY TO ACCEPT
GAGE OF BATTLE
SAYS ALEXANDRIS

If Turks Persist in Reparations Demand, Greek Delegates Will Withdraw From Conference.

ARMY WELL EQUIPPED,
HE TELLS REPORTERS

Turks Have Given No Indication of Receding From Their Reparations Demand, It Is Said.

Lausanne, May 21.—(By the Associated Press.)—If Turkey insists on war to settle the question of the indemnity she claims is due from Greece, then Greece will accept the gage of battle, M. Alexandris, the Greek foreign minister, told the foreign correspondents tonight.

The Greek delegates, he added, will be withdrawn from the Near Eastern conference this week if Turkey persists in her reparations demands.

Turks Standing Firm.

The Turks have given no indication of an intention to recede from their reparations demands, and M. Alexandris' declaration that Greece was resolved not to pay one cent of indemnity brought increased pessimism in conference circles.

The Greek foreign minister denied that he had come to Lausanne in a bellicose mood but said the Greek army had been reorganized since the overthrow of Constantine and was now well equipped and armed and able to take care of itself.

With reference to possible war, M. Alexandris said: "Turkey seems to feel that Greece was beaten in the war and therefore owes an indemnity. But this is a grave error, as Greece was merely beaten in battle in Asia Minor and hostilities were suspended by an armistice which Greece is trying to transform into peace. But if the Turks propose to resume the war to obtain an indemnity then Greece accepts the challenge."

Will Have Conference.

"My government has determined to retire from the conference next Wednesday or Thursday, when the indemnity question comes up in plenary session, if Turkey insists upon an unjust position or any effort is made to force Greece to accept this position."

M. Alexandris repeated the Greek contention that Turkey and Greece should mutually renounce reparations as the only possible solution.

The second month of the second conference will open tomorrow in a troubled atmosphere, with none of the great issues settled.

Breach of Promise Suit by N. Y. Actress To Come Up in Rome

Rome, Ga., May 21.—(Special.) When the $50,000 breach of promise suit of Helen A. Coates, New York actress, against James F. DeJournette, prominent business man of this city, comes to trial this week in the United States district court, it is expected to attract more attention than any other case tried here in a quarter of a century.

The case was featured at the time the suit was filed by the printing in certain newspapers of letters purporting to be from Mr. DeJournette to the plaintiff. Now, it is stated, Mr. DeJournette will have his day in court and that his attorneys will offer in evidence a number of letters written him by the woman in the case.

Miss Coates was a resident of Atlanta at the time of the alleged breach of promise, but is now a resident of New York, where she is said to be a member of a theatrical company, "The Midnight Rounders."

Mr. DeJournette, a man in middle life and a widower, has been one of the most prominent business men in Rome for many years. He is widely known over the state. This added to the intimation that there may be more than a little "spice" in the evidence brought out at the trial, is expected to bring out a crowd that will tax the capacity of the court room.

Display Italian Art Of Noted Sculptor On Peachtree Street

Atlanta lovers of art have a chance to beautify their homes with real Italian hand-made statues, consisting of lamps, vases, bowls, pedestals and vases, all reproductions from the originals and made in Florence, Italy.

These works of art are exhibited here by A. Gabellieri, famous sculptor of Florence, Italy. Every piece exhibited was made in Mr. Gabellieri's studio and brought to America by him.

Mr. Gabellieri will leave Atlanta after this week. Those wishing to attend the exhibition may do so any day this week between the hours of 8 and 8, at 166 Peachtree street, opposite Howard theater.

Meyers Will Speak At Bi-Weekly Meet Of Trades Bodies

Atlanta Federation of Trades will hold its regular semi-monthly meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at Labor temple, 112 Trinity avenue. President E. L. Quinn of the organization requests that all delegates be present. A. L. Meyers, prominent merchant and a member of the Christian club, is scheduled to make an address.

Mr. Meyers will ask the federation to take action on the changing of Atlanta's official time from standard central to eastern time.

NAME BENEFICIARIES Eight Atlantans Notified of Hearing of Will

Eight Atlanta people are beneficiaries in the estate of Mrs. M. E. Heard, prominent and wealthy Athens woman, who died March 23, according to formal notice of hearing on the proving of her will, received in Atlanta Monday from Clarke county court of ordinary. The formal proving of the will is set for June 4, in Athens. Duane H. Himmelfarb is executor. Atlanta people named as beneficiaries are Mrs. William A.

Wright and Miss Georgia Cox, of 90 East Eighth street; Miss Fannie Cox, Miss Edna Cox, Sterling Cox, and John Cox, of 300 West Peachtree street; Mrs. Annie Cox Stiles, of 447 North Boulevard, and Mrs. Herbert White, of 555 Washington street. Others are Mrs. M. A. Tuggle, of LaGrange, and Albert H. Cox, of Bremen. Value of the estate was not mentioned in information received here Monday.

GEORGIAN WORKING TO SAVE CAPTIVES

long residence in China, is willing to negotiate with the bandits, provided he is given full plenipotentiary powers by the Chinese government. But, as the bandits have no confidence in the guaranty of the Pekin authorities, and are insisting the foreign powers offer guarantees of immunity, the chief hope of early release for the prisoners lies in direct foreign negotiations, the department is advised.

Foreign diplomats met in Pekin Monday to consider such action. Secretary Hughes will be guided entirely by the recommendation of the conference. He has given Minister Schurman carte-blanche permission to act in any way most likely to save the lives of the prisoners.

No Orders for Troops.

Officials at the war and state departments deny any orders have been issued for sending additional troops to China from the Philippines. Such action may be taken, however, after Gen. Leonard Wood confers with the foreign diplomats at Pekin. But it would be ostensibly for the future protection of foreign lives and property, and not for the purpose of fighting the present bandit gang in Shantung.

Total absence of any respect for the Pekin government by the bandits has forced the real responsibility for result upon the shoulders of the foreign powers. Officials here realize this, but they frankly confess their inability to form a plan of action from this end.

The bandits demand the foreign powers guarantee immunity from punishment. If this demand is refused, the prisoners may be executed. If it is granted, the powers officially go on record as compounding a felony, and the tendency would be to encourage other bandits to commit similar outrages to obtain outside protection. These problems all have been weighed, and the result is that Hughes is leaving recommendations entirely in the hands of Minister Schurman.

Regarding the complaints of Chinese Minister Sze that bandits have obtained arms from foreign governments, officials here point out the United States has forbidden the exportation of arms to China.

Powers Must Act.

Peking, May 21.—The time has passed when powers will accomplish anything toward release of the foreigners held captive by bandits in the mountains of Shantung. The powers must now decide whether to use force.

As a result of this opinion, held to a man by foreign representatives who have investigated the situation in the bandit area, diplomats are in close touch with their governments, discussing what action should be taken.

Foreign commercial organizations are pressing their respective legations to use extreme measures toward effecting release of the prisoners. The government having failed to reach any terms for settlement with the bandits, the matter is now squarely up to the legations.

Trying Imprisonment.

Failing a settlement, the most favorable outlook for the prisoners as the situation exists now, is indefinite captivity under the most trying conditions. A most serious possibility also rests in the threat of the bandits to kill their prisoners if troops harass their mountain stronghold. The brigands' ultimatum, threatening to kill two foreigners if Chinese troops are not withdrawn, expires tonight.

Finally the bandits' secret agents are communicating with bands throughout Shantung and adjoining provinces with a view to enlisting reinforcements—action which carries the possibility of the whole countryside being swept by bandit warfare.

Confers With Minister.

Roy Anderson, the American-born negotiator who recently made a trip to the bandit stronghold for the Chinese government, was closeted most of Monday night with United States Minister Schurman, at the American legation. He declined to comment regarding the progress of the negotiations, but described the brigands' camp as surprisingly well maintained.

"The bandits are excellently organized," Anderson said. "Many of them served in France during the world war and speak several languages. Forty per cent of them have been bandits since childhood. The rest are from good families, but turned criminals under years of heavy taxation and government oppression."

"The born criminals among them want action and wholly disregard the value of foreign lives."

"Sun-Mei-Yao, the aged chieftain driven from his home, which was burned a few years ago, heads the older, saner group. He has an excellent secret service which advises him regarding the extreme riches of some of the foreigners."

"Treat them well, but don't sell them cheap," is his constant command to his subordinates.

"The bandits now know that if they are defeated by the government troops they will be beheaded. They will stay their captives before dying themselves."

Have Been Reinforced.

"The brigands' original organization numbered 1,500, but reinforcements have swelled this total into the thousands. Reports that troops outnumber the bandits from Lincheng to the sea are untrue. It is possible for the highwaymen to raise a superior force when the emergency demands."

"Before the fight with Pekin troops, the bandit camp was comfortable, but since all have moved to the mountain top. The only shelter is straw sheds and underground storehouses. Careful supervision is required to maintain the health of the outlaw army and its hostages, although the water supply possibly will last until the last stages of the fighting and food and bedding is available from relief organizations unless the soldiers completely surround the mountain."

"The captives now face the problem of keeping clean and healthful. They must erect sun shades to prevent suffering from the coming heat, as the mountain is without trees and grass. There is a supply of cooking utensils and medicine."

"The worst sufferer among the foreigners is Musso, the Italian, but his condition is not likely to become serious soon. The captives generally are bearing up well. They are all good sports. Prevention of sickness and dependency depends on their ingenuity and the co-operation of relief organizations.

"The chieftains have ordered the captives respected and the discipline maintained is superior to that in most Chinese soldiery. Even the criminal element is not vicious. Sun-Mei-Yao's two sons were educated in Shanghai. A nephew was executed by the military governor of Kiangsu, who was marked for death. Sun-Mei-Yao has never met a half dozen foreigners, except through capturing them, but is informed regarding theatres and foreign relations."

Roy Anderson, the man who is likely to carry on the negotiations for the American government with the bandits, was born in China, where his father, Dr. David Anderson, a Methodist missionary, was the founder of Chu-Chow Methodist Training school.

He was a member of the 1903 class at Emory university and later returned to China, where he became a professor in the school founded by his father.

Roy Anderson was a visitor in Atlanta only three months ago, when he revisited the scenes of his hood and was entertained by his mer classmates, among whom a Louis Dennen, Dr. Montague B. V. Moore, Dr. Stewart R. Robert, Charles P. Shelton, Laurin Forman, Dr. John Denton and Thomas W. Connolly.

He is a cousin to Will, Albert and Logan Thompson, of Atlanta.

According to announcement by officials Monday evening. The meeting will be held at the Congregation Abrahah Aelam at the corner of Woodward and Washington streets, and delegates to the national convention in Baltimore, June 17, will be named. Matters concerning the further up-building of Palestine will be discussed at the convention. Full attendance is urged by J. Saul, chairman.

"Plantation Nights," Kiwanis Attraction, Rehearsed by Cast

A rehearsal of "Plantation Nights," the big pageant of southern plantation days to be presented for the entertainment of visitors to the international Kiwanis convention here next week, was held Monday night. The event is being planned by a committee of local Kiwanians headed by Fred Colegate, Virgil Shepard will be stage director.

Nearly 200 persons, including Asa G. Candler, Colonel William Lawson Pool and other prominent Atlantans, will appear in the cast. Dr. Claude N. Hughes, prominent dentist, will take the leading part, in the role of a southern colonel. Plantation life in the middle of the nineteenth century will be vividly depicted.

Negro Voices to Fill Auditorium Tonight

Tonight the annual Holmes Institute musical concert will be presented at the Auditorium. An elaborate program has been arranged. A chorus of 200 voices will render a number of old plantation and camp-meeting melodies, dear to the hearts of all southerners. The chorus will be composed of those whose dialect and voices enable them to sing the old songs with the same feeling that they were sung in the days of long ago.

Many Solos and Duets.

Numerous solos and duets are listed on the program. It was announced Monday that one of the most popular of all songs of the old south, entitled "In the Evening by the Moonlight," will be among the selections that will be given. Besides the well-prepared musical program, M. L. Throver, Paul S. Etheridge, B. R. Holmes, and several others are scheduled to deliver short addresses.

Proceeds, as in years past, will be used to assist the colored institution in the financing and building of a new

REQUEST RECEIVER FOR NEGRO CHURCH

Petition for a receiver for Mount Pleasant Baptist church, colored, and for judgment for $1,000 for attorney fees and money advanced, will be heard by Judge John D. Humphries Saturday morning at the instance of Roy S. Drennan, who filed the petition Monday.

Drennan states in his suit that the church had agreed to let him handle the church and that he had been used to assist the colored institution in the financing and building of a new $4,500 church on a percentage basis. He has advanced several hundred dollars, he says, under an agreement that the trustees were to pay him a stipulated sum each month to defray building expenses. These sums have not been paid, he alleges.

The petition states that the congregation is insolvent and asks that a receiver be appointed to protect the interests of its creditors.

Daniel Fighting for Recovery From Wounds.

With Jack Daniel, 101 Whitehall street, Monday fighting for recovery from knife wounds inflicted Sunday afternoon in the left side of the stomach and back, police and detectives were scouring the city for the yellow negro whom he described as his assailant.

Daniel told Detectives H. L. Turner and B. E. Moon that he went into a soft drink stand at Chapel and Haynes streets, calling for a bottled drink. His assailant followed him out of the store, he stated, and stabbed him twice as he resisted his efforts to rob him.

Can't Issue Peace Bonds to Protect Debtor, Is Ruling

Peace warrants can not be invoked to protect a man from his creditors, Judge Hatcock told Fred A. Gaines, of Piedmont avenue, motion picture theater promoter, Monday afternoon, in binding him over under $100 on a charge of cheating and swindling. Gaines had instituted peace bond proceedings against Thomas H. Wall, of the Lakewood park motion picture theater, and Wall appeared in court to answer them. Monday afternoon. He told the judge that he had advanced $20 to Gaines for expenses in securing financial backing for a mutual venture. The backing was not secured, the money was not used for the purpose for which Gaines had secured it, and Wall had not been able to secure a refund, Wall testified.

The peace warrant against Wall was dismissed and the cheating and swindling charge was docketed against Gaines instead.

DRAWING AND ESSAY PRIZES ARE AWARDED

J. L. Walker Given the First Prize for Best Description of Atlanta.

Presentation of prizes offered by the Atlanta convention bureau for the best essay and drawing on "Atlanta, as The Ideal Convention City" was made at a luncheon held at the Davidson-Paxon-Stokes store on Whitehall street Monday afternoon. Mrs. B. M. Boykin, chairman; Mrs. R. K. Rando and Mrs. Charles M. Jerome composed the committee of judges. Only students at Girls' and Tech High schools were eligible to enter the contest.

Walker Wins.
J. L. Walker, of Tech High, was given the first prize of $25; Geraldine Ferris, of Girls' High, second prize of $15, and Douglas B. Kendrick, third prize of $10. Kenneth Myers and E. L. Dupre were awarded $5 each for their drawings, which will be used by the bureau in advertising this city.

C. H. Smith, J. N. Towns, Susan Clayton and Mary Dunlap were given honorable mention. Colonel Paxon, president of the convention bureau, presided, and entertained the participants in the contest for their good work. Among other speakers were Miss Jessie Muse, principal of Girls' High; Professor W. O. Cheney, principal of Tech High, and A. A. Lacour, drawing teacher at Tech High.

Sutton in Address.
Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools, in a short address declared that the south's climate, its people's temperament, their appreciation for all fine arts, should make the south the center of the art of the universe. He declared further that when the central park plaza and other projects being contemplated for the beautification of Atlanta, are completed, Atlanta with its already beautiful residential sections, can compare with any city in the world for beauty, and beauty is where art flourishes.

would the populace keep such strict order and discipline in the absence of police—there are no police in the Ruhr—as the Ruhrers have done? I pointed out to Thyssen that the German industrialists' league had held thirty billions in reparations excessive.

DANGER SIGNALS OF INDIGESTION

The Disease That Strikes Like Lightning.

Beware of indigestion—the disease that kills more people and kills them quicker than any other. The warning, by physicians, is particularly applicable this season of the year, when your system "lets down" in tone and vigor with the first approach of warm weather.

What are the warnings that nature gives you of the approach of indigestion? The medical books tell us: 1. Gas, which means that your food is fermenting instead of digesting. 2. A feeling of fullness or oppression in the region of the stomach after eating. This means that the gas has ballooned your stomach and is pressing up against your heart and lungs. 3. A dull, lazy feeling, which means that you are not getting nourishment from what you are eating. 4. Restlessness, unrefreshing sleep, which means that the poisons of indigestion are disturbing your brain and nerves. 5. Sometimes, pain and fluttering around the heart, though this symptom may come later.

Don't take chances with indigestion—you are too apt to lose. If you have had any of the symptoms mentioned above, get your digestive organs to work at once with Dan-Nax, the greatest prescription that was ever written for a digestive tonic. Dan-Nax immediately aids and assists every one of your digestive organs, including the stomach, liver and bowels. Dan-Nax makes your digestion "perfect" and complete. You feel its helpful effect from the very first dose. Get a bottle of Dan-Nax today at any drug store. Dan-Nax is so much superior to any other remedy for indigestion that the manufacturers have instructed every druggist to refund the price if you do not get relief, so it costs you nothing if you are not delighted with results. Delay might be dangerous, get Dan-Nax today—(adv.)

Asked whether there was any chance of a huge holding company or pool being formed in which the French would have an interest as added assurance of payment of the reparations, Thyssen replied:

FAITHFUL SERVANT LOSES HIS MIND

he has done his work day by day, always reliable, always faithful to his task.

Howard is a negro, yet there are few of any color who can point to a more perfect record of service in the appointed place to which duty and fate has called them.

Started to Worry.

Just about one month ago, Howard came down to work with sorrow, fear and worry eating their shadows across his path. He told his story of terror to his white friends in the

The night before a crowd of men had come to his home. They had called his brother-in-law, who lived with him, out on the porch and there they had seized him, thrown him into an automobile, and carried him away. When morning came, Howard learned that the body of that brother-in-law had been found, riddled with bullets, lying beside the road where it had been thrown from a speeding auto.

Why this deed was done, no one knows, positively. Of course, there is a theory. Friends, sympathizers and the police always have a theory to fit every crime. The brother-in-law had been, admittedly, engaged more or less in the bootlegging trade. He had received a summons, the day before, to appear before John A. Boykin, solicitor-general for Fulton county. The theory was that the negro knew too much of the workings of a certain run-running organization and that members of that organization had put him away forever, fearful that he might "tell too much" to the solicitor.

Story of Howard.

It doesn't matter, to this story, however, just what was the mystery behind the tragic death. It was the effect of that death on the mind of Howard Nichols, porter at the capitol, that made this story.

Monday morning, Howard and his wife came into the office where he had worked so long. The woman was the spokesman for the pair.

"Please, sir," she said, "I've Howard's wife, and I want you to all to help me find some place to keep her. He's done gone crazed in the head."

The office force started. Then there was a flood of questions. It seemed unbelievable, that the shivering negro, tears running down his face, who stood behind this colored woman, was Howard, the Howard who had always come running fast when they called and who knew more about the filing systems and office arrangements than any of them.

The whole story came out. The wife told how Howard had spent the entire night crouching behind an old sofa in their humble home, begging in mumbling words, punctuated with shrieks of horror, that "they" have mercy and leave him alone.

Loses His Mind.

Howard fearfully explained that he "knew" those men, out near his home, would "get" him. He said even his neighbors disliked him, calling him "that nigger what struts 'round like a statehouse official."

He asked for a vacation from his porter's duties, suggesting that he might be sent to some place of safety where "the mob," couldn't harm him. Then his terror swept over him anew. With a sudden cry, he jumped into a dark corner of the office, be-

Stomach Trouble, Choking Sensation and Palpitation Entirely Overcome By Tanlac, Declares Brunswick Resident.

"My experience with the Tanlac treatment has been most gratifying. Indeed, for it has restored me to perfect health, while all the time I was suffering so much as help me," states Mrs. Mary E. Clark, of 501 F Street, Brunswick, Georgia.

"I suffered from indigestion and nervous trouble for two or three years, while living at Helena, Ga., where I was born and reared. My stomach was so upset that I couldn't keep anything down half the time, and what little I did manage to retain caused frightful choking sensations and pains in my chest. My heart would palpitate and flutter so that I often thought it was going to stop beating altogether. My nerves were so shattered I was tremble and excitable and couldn't sleep nights to do any good."

"I heard folks in Helena talking about Tanlac and how good it was for indigestion and all the things connected with stomach trouble, and decided to try it myself. After taking two bottles I felt so much better I waited a while before taking any more. Then I took three more bottles, or five altogether, and I just improved wonderfully in every way. I could eat anything without suffering a particle afterwards, slept like a child at night, and in fact was perfectly well again. I can never praise Tanlac enough for the wonderful health it has given me."

tween a desk and the wall, and crouched there, begging:

"Save me! Save me! White folks, please don't let that gang take me away."

He was sent to a good doctor, who pronounced his obsession harmless and held out hope that some day, perhaps with proper care, his mind, no longer, might be coaxed back to its normal place. Then he was sent home to rest.

CHICKEN SALES HELD ALONG GEORGIA ROAD

Co-operative Marketing Plan Proves Great Success for Poultry Raisers.

Monthly co-operative chicken sales are being held in counties traversed by the Georgia railroad, according to an announcement Monday. Sales are being sponsored by the county agents, in co-operation with the agricultural department of the Georgia railroad, the State College of Agriculture and the state department of agriculture.

Joint Sales.

The first of the joint sales was conducted by the following county agents: J. M. Turner, Columbia county; E. P. Drexel, McDuffie county; W. H. West, Greene county; and L. S. Watson, Morgan county.

Through the co-operation of the Georgia railroad, a tariff on live poultry in transit, allowing car to stop at different points, was obtained. The first stop was at Harlem, in Columbia county. When loading was finished at this point the car was moved to Thomson, McDuffie county. When loading was finished at Thomson the car was moved to Greensboro, Greene county, and when all the chickens offered at this place had been purchased the car was moved at Madison, Morgan county, where the loading was completed. The car was shipped to Risser & Rabinowitz, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Increase in Production.

Due to increase in production of poultry, the schedule has been changed and hereafter two monthly sales will be held. County Agent Frank O. Montague, of Wilkes county, and County Agent W. H. West, of Greene county, will hold joint sales, loading a car, and County Agent J. M. Turner, of Columbia county; County Agent E. P. Drexel, of McDuffie county, and County Agent L. S. Watson, of Morgan county, will load a car.

The most recent series of these sales was held on May 16-17. Loading began at Harlem, was continued at Thomson, and completed at Madison. This car was also purchased by Risser & Rabinowitz, of Philadelphia, and the following prices were received: Fries, 28 cents per pound; hens, 21 1/2 cents per pound; roosters, 9 cents per pound. Total tonnage received at these three stops was 10,949 pounds, which brought a total of $2,481.67.

Capitol Renovation
To Be Asked in Bill
By Lawrence Camp

Representative Lawrence Camp, of Campbell county, announced Monday that he will introduce a bill at the next legislature to provide for improvements, repairs and additions to the state capitol, to cost more than a quarter million dollars.

The legislature will be asked, in this bill, to provide the money necessary for complete renovation of the present building, for the addition of several more stories, for the construction of an annex and for improvement of the capitol grounds.

"With the capitol removal fight a matter of history," said Mr. Camp, "my proposal for proper care of the present capitol ought to win the support of all factions. That the need is vital, we all know."

HomeWeek Plans

Mrs. Newton C. Wing Is Named Chairman—House
Selected for Sample.

Preparations for observance of the national "Better Homes" week, June 4-10, are now under way here, according to announcement by Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman of the committee in charge of the local observance of the movement.

The "Better Homes" week is sponsored by the "Better Homes in America" advisory council and is being conducted for the second time, the first week of its kind having been observed in 1922.

Social Progress.

"In any survey of social progress in the United States in 1922 that year will stand out as marking among its foremost accomplishments the nationwide campaign for better homes in America," Mrs. Wing declared Monday.

"The objective of last year's campaign was to set up in a thousand communities of the United States a model small home, meeting the approval of a group of specialists representative of the nation's best thought and experience in architecture, sanitation and housing."

"These specialists desired to help men and women of modest means, to show those who were already house owners how to improve what they had, or, if they were prospective builders, how to go about choosing a neighborhood, selecting a site and financing themselves, to give them the advantage of the best experience and practice in equipment, furnishing, decorating and labor-saving installation."

Home Is Selected.

Mrs. Wing announced that the house at 57 Orme circle, in Boulevard park, has been chosen as the model home for the local demonstration. The national advisory council is composed of the nation's leaders, among them being Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover.

Atlanta Real Estate Board, and Robert Witherspoon, representing the Atlanta Electrical association, are on Levi W. Reeves, secretary of the Mrs. Wing's committee.

Drink An Orange
—the breakfast rule of millions now

Drink an orange every morning for five reasons:

1. To have a refreshing drink of luscious flavor.
2. To stimulate the appetite. The zest of orange juice is most effective.
3. To help in the digestion of the entire meal. Natural salts and acids do it.
4. To get needed vitamines in an attractive way.
5. To offset the acidity of acid-producing foods. Oranges although known as "acid fruit" have an alkaline reaction in the blood!

To "drink an orange" is the habit of millions of healthy people now. Make it yours.

ARREST GIRL AND MAN AFTER AUTO ACCIDENT

A. D. Nuckols, of Clarkston, and pretty 18-year-old Theula Tipton, of 273 Greenwich avenue, were placed under arrest in connection with an automobile collision in DeKalb county Sunday afternoon in which Mrs. C. D. Marsh and Miss Sarah Ashurst, of 615 Lawton street, were injured. Nuckols Taken Immediately.

Nuckols was arrested immediately after the accident, a warrant being obtained for Miss Tipton, who is reported to have fled from the scene of the wreck. She was arrested by Atlanta police for the sheriff of DeKalb county.

Neither Mrs. Marsh nor Miss Ashurst was seriously hurt, it is said. They were given treatment in a DeKalb hospital and went home.

Little Girls Improved. Continued improvement Monday was reported in the condition of 10-year-old Ellen Ball and Dorothy Wishart, age 9, whose skulls were fractured by motor trucks Saturday night. Both are at St. Joseph's infirmary.

Drivers of both trucks were arrested under charges of reckless driving.

CERAMIC ENGINEERING PLANNED FOR "TECH"

Plans for the establishment of a ceramic and extensive ceramic engineering course at the Georgia School of Technology will be discussed by the members of the Georgia Ceramic Industries organization, at a meeting to be held in the Georgia Tech administration building this morning at 11 o'clock, according to announcements by B. Mifflin Hood, of the B. Mifflin Hood Brick company.

The move for the installation of this course has been under active consideration for some time, several meetings having been already conducted, in addition to the appointment of a number of committees. It is with the end in view of developing Georgia's natural resources, with especial emphasis on the vast stores of ceramic material contained in the state, that the proposed course was introduced.

There is no school in the south which maintains an engineering branch of this nature, it is said. The organization of ceramic industries declares Georgia to possess the greatest area of undeveloped china, clays and kaolin of any state in the union and a no more fitting location for the proposed institution than Georgia Tech could be found.

It is expected that definite steps toward this and will be taken at the meeting today and all interested persons are requested to attend.

With training being available along the lines of ceramic engineering and production at present, it is permitting a vast wealth to lay idle, it is said. If students could be afforded this course it would be but a short time until this natural product would be put forth on a large and decidedly lucrative scale.

In the last few years Georgia's agricultural status has dropped to a point where it is said that the birth of this far-reaching industry the state would once more be placed on its feet financially, it is declared.

FAIR WEATHER TODAY

Cloudy Weather Predicted for Wednesday.

Fair weather will prevail in Georgia today, according to the weather forecasters in Washington, but on Wednesday it will be cloudy, with probable showers. There will be little change in temperature, the report predicts.

WOMAN WIELDS WICKED KNIFE, POLICE DECLARE

Beulah Taylor, colored, looked tame enough when she appeared in Recorder Johnson's court yesterday afternoon charged with disturbing the peace. Apparently she glared at the big fellows of the law who stood around the rostrum of justice.

The court, however, was shocked when the police officers who arrested her told how she came down the street wielding a huge meat cleaver, telling the whole world that she wanted to kill her husband.

"When we got close to her, judge, she yelled like a banshee. She brandished that wicked-looking knife and she fought like a wildcat," the officers said.

"Was she drunk?" the court asked. Before the potted her composure, Beulah resumed her fight. "I was not drunk, judge. I was naturally aggravated with that husband of mine. I don't want to support him any longer," she said.

Victim of Kidnaping and Kirkwood Home To Which He Was Returned by Abductors

In the above insert is J. A. Maloney, Kirkwood contractor, who mysteriously disappeared from his home two weeks ago, and who was laid in a semi-conscious condition on the porch of his residence, indicated by the cross on the photograph, early Monday morning.

MALONEY RECOUNTS HORRIBLE STORY

when he was found semi-conscious, securely bound and gagged, upon his front door steps.

Removed Once.

On one occasion Mr. Maloney stated that he had been removed from his subterranean prison, blindfolded, placed in an automobile and taken to a river. His captors informed him that he was to be placed in a canvas bag, similar Mr. Maloney stated, to a straight-jacket—and thrown into the water to drown. During the trip from his prison to the river he said he begged them not to place the bag about him but to tie him hand and foot, and if necessary, tie a weight about him. Mr. Maloney stated that the very thought of the canvas bag was horrible. He also declared he felt he might have a possible chance of extracting himself from ordinary bonds. The men gave him no hope of escaping this particular method of death, but on reaching the river bank they turned back and once again placed him in the house, he claims.

His captors were well dressed men, he stated, and spoke good English. Only one negro was in the party.

Tells Story.

Speaking in very low tones, and with much effort, Mr. Maloney told the story of his adventure. "Monday, two weeks ago, I went downtown to fill a business engagement. After parking my automobile in the rear of the Hurt building, I walked up Edgewood avenue toward Pryor street. A stranger stopped from the curb and accosted me, asking if I were J. A. Maloney.

"I told him I was and he asked me a question regarding some construction work. He then requested me to accompany him to look over a location, where, he stated, he contemplated building. Having an hour to spare before my engagement, I readily agreed and we got into his car, accompanied by another man, whom I did not know."

"We rode out Luckie street a block past Northern and proceeded off to the right about two blocks. After looking at one lot, he told me there was a lot in the rear that he would like me to see. I followed him to the designated spot and he invited me to sit down upon a stump."

"At his invitation I told him I preferred to stand. He then drew a revolver and pressing it to my side, ordered me to be seated."

"You have turned up two of my friends for bootlegging," he said, and we are going to get you for it."

"I assured him that I had not taken part in any such occurrence and we waited there until another man joined us. We got in the car again and rode out Howell Mill road until dark. We then came back to the corner of Pine and Luckie streets and the men put a flannel sack over my head."

"After about an hour's riding I was taken out, and when I regained consciousness I found myself in a dark cellar where rats and insects scurried about the walls and floor. About 10 o'clock the next morning one of my captors brought me a dirty pan of water and an aged loaf of bread. Later I was given a small can of rotten meat and left to my own ingenuity to break its covering.

"With little or no nourishment I remained in first one cellar and then the other for a period of two weeks. "Then Sunday night I was borne to a car and informed that I was again on my way to the river and death. This time we never came near any water to my knowledge, but after riding several hours the car was stopped in front of my house and the bandage from my eyes was removed. I was entirely too weak to make any outcry, and they placed me on the front steps."

"Two of the men I believe I can identify if I ever meet them again. I intend spending every spare moment of my time looking for these men and believe that some day I will make them account for the horrible treatment I received at their hands."

No Reason Available.

Mr. Maloney could give no reason why he should have been abducted. He stated that he had had no previous trouble of any nature, especially emphasizing his denial of any connection with any of the men's "friends" whom he was accused of "turning up."

Mr. Maloney believes the house to be within the city limits of Atlanta. He declared that it was on a street paved with cobblestones. All during his stay in the cellar he stated he could hear sounds that led him to believe a large still was contained in the house. The odor of beer was strongly evident, he stated.

Public Service Commission Sets Hearings Ahead

Owing to various unavoidable causes, a number of hearings before the state public service commission, which have already been postponed at least once from the original date set, were again set forward on Monday. These hearings will now take place as follows:

On June 14, (formerly set for June 8), Lanier County Power company hearing, on a petition to issue $300,000 in capital stock.

A. B. & A. railway hearing on petition to discontinue its agency station at Aberdeen, Ga.

Rome & Northern railway hearing, on petition to issue $100,000 in stock.

Wadley-Southern railway hearing on a petition to change the schedule of its train No. 4, between Stillmore and Wadley.

Hearing of a petition from citizens of Crawfordville to require the Georgia railroad to step its fast trains, No. 5 and No. 6, at their depot.

On June 12, (formerly set for June 10), Hearing of a petition, by the Greensboro Telephone company, to discontinue its exchange at Franklin, Georgia, Florida, and Alabama railway hearing of a petition to issue $225,000 in capital stock.

On June 14, a petition of the Savannah, Glennville and Western railway for the issuance of $50,000 of capital stock will be heard. This road was, before its reorganization, the Savannah and Southern.

FLORENCE LEEDS TELLS LIFE STORY

17, 1918, and christened at St. Ignace's church, Jay Ward Stillman.

Baby Dies.

"A year or so later, another babe came," Mrs. Leeds said. "To my mind, it had been taken back to God before it saw the light of day."

A third child, Baptist Ainslie, was born a year later, at Sloan's hospital, on the 14th of November, 1920. This child died four hours after birth.

It was in an exclusive interview with The United News that Mrs. Leeds bared this story of her life.

"Now people should know that I was not having the gay times the papers wrote about," she said. "He was considerate when the children were born. I thought he would love them as I did."

"I am so thankful little Jay was spared to me, for he is the one light of my life, now, the one thing I have to live for."

For Jay, Mrs. Leeds is contemplating suit against Stillman. She seeks nothing for herself.

Gives Written Statement.

Because of statements purporting to come from Mrs. Leeds and giving a false impression of her intentions, she gave The United News a formal written statement to the effect that she is considering legal action against the former president of the National City bank.

Following closely upon the exclusive revelation that Mrs. Leeds had been cast adrift by Stillman, who, in turn, it is claimed, had switched his interest to a woman prominent in New York's social and financial world, there came the word of Mrs. Leeds herself, in confirmation of the fact. Furthermore, it was disclosed that she contemplated some legal action to procure from Stillman support of her son Jay. The sting motivating this contemplated course may now better be realized with the disclosure that she was thinking not only of her living son but of two other children born during her relations with Stillman, one of whom died at birth and another who died four hours after birth.

And as Flo begins again to stir the waters about James A. Stillman, there comes the report from other quarters that Fred Beauvais, the Indian guide, who figured in that part of Stillman's divorce action questioning the legitimacy of Mrs. Anne V. Stuart Stillman's son, Guy, has been vindictive and may be contemplating some action to embarrass her.

Talk of New York.

Thus the "Stillman case" once more has become the talk of New York. Beneath the surface there again pear to be different plots, all sorts of possible court actions—and unlimited revelations. Up to now Mrs. Leeds and Mrs. Stillman are the only ones who have talked—Mrs. Stillman, to say that she would take care of Jay as her own children's "half-brother" if necessity arose; Mrs. Leeds to tell of her break with Stillman and the existence of still another woman in his life before the break.

The third woman mentioned as the one to whom he had diverted his fancy before leaving Flo was located in Paris by The United News, but declined reports of his attraction to her and refused to discuss the matter in any way.

Mr. Stillman, thus far, has maintained the silence he has pursued for many months.

Will Keep Her Son.

Mrs. Leeds held a salon in her Park avenue apartment late Monday evening, as half-reluctant hostess to twenty men and women writers of the morning newspapers, and declared she had no intention of accepting Mrs. Anne U. Stillman's offer of friendly assistance in the fighting of her baby son Jay's battles. She also stated, rather heartily, that she had not been "living off" Mr. Stillman, and said he never had made any settlement on her.

"I think it was admirable of her," Mrs. Leeds said, when asked whether she expected to take advantage of Mrs. Stillman's offer, "but I have gone through the hard part alone and can go through the rest of it alone. I am young and I have the rest of my life before me. My plans are to improve myself and bring up my boy along the best lines that I can. There are lots of things I can do. I'm a good writer. I might be a lady reporter."

Features Which Will Interest Every Woman

Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Sharp Will Honor Club Presidents

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith and Mrs. Brian Sharp will honor Mrs. R. Boykin and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson at a large afternoon tea Friday afternoon at the Atlanta Woman's club. They will be assisted by the officers of the club, who are Mrs. Ount Elder, Mrs. W. F. Melton, Mrs. Wylie, Mrs. A. R. Alford, Mrs. Orian Pool and Mrs. Howard O'Call. Mrs. John M. Cooper, the club chairman of hospitality, will receive at the door and will be assisted by Mrs. E. H. Goodhart and Mrs. James T. Williams.

Mrs. Stearns Honors Guests At Charming Afternoon Tea

Mrs. Harry Stearns was hostess at afternoon tea Monday at her home on Peachtree street. Her honor guests were her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Jones, of Little Rock, Ark., and Miss Lillie Cabaniss Peoples, whose marriage to Andrew Miller Fairlie will be an interesting social event of the evening. The tea table was overlaid with a cloth of light blue. In the center was a large basket filled with osage, yellow snapdragons, lavender sweet peas and delphinium mingling their pastel colors in charming effect against the low of orchid tulle which caught the candle.

League of Women Voters Will Give Lunch Thursday

The League of Women Voters will give a luncheon Thursday at 1 o'clock at the Capital City club. The guest of honor will be Miss M. Louise Griffith.

MISS GERTRUDE WATKINS.

fifth, of Missouri, who is the assistant treasurer of the National League of Women Voters.

Miss Griffith is a most versatile and interesting woman. She has come to Georgia to help with the sustaining membership campaign. She is believed to know more of the science of finance than almost any other woman in the league, and she knows just as much about raising cats.

Miss Griffith admits knowing about cats, but as to finance, she insists she knows no more than she was obliged to learn when the financial affairs of the suffrage hospital unit in France were thrust upon her and not a quarter of a penny could be wasted. In her flat in New York—she is shareholder in a genuine cooperative real estate company which has taken four old houses in Fifth street and made them over into delightful flats—she has a famous black Persian cat named Fatima.

Miss Griffith's scientific methods of cat care.

Cats and Library Work.

Besides knowing all about cats, Miss Griffith knows all about library science. She is a graduate of the New York Public Library school and served for years in a library on the east side so that she knows a great deal about many kinds of human beings, and was that rare thing among librarians, a real book-fitter, helping every patron of the library to the book most comfortable for his mind. She knows a deal about line and color, too. She studied design for two years before library work, followed by financial work for the Y. W. C. A. She deserves credit, she says, for ever, for learning so much about so many things. A desire to get at the root of every new enterprise was born with her, like the twinkle in her friendly blue eyes, and the Mary Stuart peak in which her heavy brown hair grows.

Miss Watkins Here Too.

Ramey-Pendley Wedding Plans Are Announced

Invitations have been issued to the wedding of Miss Ellen Dent Ramey and Norman Powell Pendley, which will be a beautiful social event of Friday evening, June 1, at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Werner Ramey, on Myrtle street. A lovely bit of sentiment is the fact that the wedding date is the anniversary of that of the bride-elect's mother and father.

Mr. Ramey will give his daughter in marriage. Dr. S. H. Bell, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church, will perform the ceremony.

Mrs. E. B. Irwin, of Birmingham, Ala., sister of the bride-elect, will be her matron of honor. Miss Louise Dent will be maid of honor and Miss Josephine Franklin, of Covington, Ala., will be bridesmaids.

Little Misses Elizabeth Wynne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wynne, and Dorothy Dent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Dent, will be flower girls.

Master Henry Rice, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Rice, and Edward Blackman, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Blackman, will be the ribbon bearers.

Emile McKenzie, of Dothan, Ala., will act as Mr. Pendley's best man. A brilliant reception will follow the ceremony.

Sheltering Arms May Fete Is Postponed

Owing to the unsettled condition of the weather and conflicting programs, notice of another date for the May fete of the Sheltering Arms nursery, which cannot be given out at this time, but announcement will be made in a few days. This annual fete of the Sheltering Arms was to have taken place on Saturday, 19th, at the residence of Ex-Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton, Wingfield, Peachtree road, and much disappointment was felt in its postponement.

It is requested by Mrs. Marion Harper, president of the association, that any member leaving the city and wishing to deliver her article of rummage before hand, will kindly send it to the Georgian Terrace, as store room has been provided there. All other members and friends are requested to hold their packages in readiness until another announcement, which will be made through the newspapers and by personal letter, in a short time.

Rambler Club to Give Dance at Roseland

Announcement is made by the Rambler club, a new social organization recently formed by a large number of the young dancing set of the city, that their first dance will be held at the Roseland hall, corner Peachtree and Cain streets, Thursday evening, May 24, beginning at 9 o'clock. These dances will be held every Thursday night and all friends of the members of the Rambler orchestra are cordially invited.

Municipal Chorus Will Take Part In Elks' Visit

The municipal chorus being sponsored by the woman's division of the chamber of commerce, under the direction of Senor Volpi, will participate in the great patriotic demonstration which will be staged by the Elks at Piedmont park Sunday, July 8, the day before the opening of the Elks' convention, and also at the opening night exercises of the convention at the auditorium, the night of July 9.

Joint rehearsals of this chorus with the Elks' chorus, also under the direction of Senor Volpi, are being given every Tuesday and Friday night, and by the time the convention meets it is expected that these voices will be trained to that point that the chorus will do credit to the city of Atlanta and to the director.

It is announced that there is room in the chorus for more voices, and if any one is interested in getting into this chorus complete information will be given over telephone Ky 8090.

The two choruses will rehearse at the chamber of commerce tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Every member is urged to be present.

Aid Society To Meet.
There will be an important meeting of the Hebrew Orphans' Aid society held Thursday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Ernest Horwitz, 90 Briarcliff Road.

Mrs. Ayer announces that a collection of articles, made by these soldiers, will also be on sale in the Antique shop of Mr. and Mrs. Woodward on Peachtree street between Peachtree and West Peachtree streets. The proceeds of the sale will be given to the soldiers who have made the articles among which are hand-woven rugs, baskets, hand work and the like.

Mrs. Louis Collier Honors Visitors.

Mrs. Louis Collier was hostess at a bridge-ten at the Duffield Monday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Gricham, of New Jersey; Miss Ina Lockhart, of Marion, Ala.; and Mrs. W. O. Thornton, of Rockford, Ill.

Tea was served at the individual tables, which held baskets of sweet peas. The score cards were hand-painted in an Egyptian design.

Top score prize was a card table set, and for consolation a hand-painted novelty.

Mrs. Collier was gowned in dark blue crepe de chine and a hat of dark blue taffeta.

Those present were Mesdames W. R. Patterson, W. T. Scott, Dudley Glass, Charles H. White, L. H. Fitzpatrick, Marshall Sims, Frances Merriam, Robert Walker, L. W. Leonard, E. A. Davis, J. B. McLearn, Lelloy Jones and June Gaillard.

Mrs. P. H. Jeter Makes Request.

Mrs. P. H. Jeter, newly appointed state recording secretary, requests all affiliated Parent-Teacher associations who have not sent in yearly reports, to send them to Mrs. P. H. Jeter, 304 Sycamore street in Decatur.

Womans' Club At Oglethorpe Gives Reception

The reception at which the Oglethorpe University Woman's club entertained in honor of the seniors of the university, Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. James F. Sellers on Peachtree Road, was the opening entertainment of those preceding the commencement exercises of the university. A special feature of the reception was the wearing of their caps and gowns by the seniors for the first time.

The members of the faculty were also guests on this occasion. The house was very beautifully decorated with quantities of pink roses. The lace covered table in the dining room had a central decoration of pink roses with pink candles held in silver candlesticks. Coffee was poured by Mrs. Thomas Fort Sellers, while Mrs. Louis D. Newton and Miss Nella Jameson assisted in serving.

The guests were received by members of the club, which is composed of the wives of the faculty and women officials of the university. Those receiving were: Mrs. Thorneville Jacobs, Mrs. James F. Miss Elizabeth Bruce Wins Campship Essay Contest

Numerous girls throughout the south, interested in Laurel Falls camp for girls at Clayton, Ga., will be further interested to know the winners of the campship essay contest, which was offered by the camp last April. The campship gives to its winner eight weeks at Laurel Falls camp and every privilege of the camp, including music, drama, art, and crafts, domestic science and camp cooking, woodcraft, athletics, shooting, swimming, canoeing, horseback riding, hikes, and trips to the auxiliary camps.

The first award of $200, on "Why I Desire to Attend a Summer Camp," went to Miss Mary Elizabeth Bruce, of Valdosta, Ga.

The judges announce the other awards of the essay contest as follows: Second award, $100 reduction on campship, to Miss Lucia Cates, 20 W. Washington street, Newnan, Ga.; Miss Cora Burghard, 431 Johnson avenue, Macon, Ga.

Third award, $50 reduction on campship, Miss Sarah L. Barrett, 17 West avenue, Gainesville, Ga.; Miss Kathryn Wilhelm, 145 N. E. Eleventh street, Miami, Fla.

Fourth award, $25 reduction on campship, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Crabb, Athens, Ga.; Miss Venice Calhoun, Sheffield, Ala.; Miss Mildred R. Stith, DeLand, Fla.; Miss Martha Burner, Waynesboro, Ga.; Miss Elizabeth Cowan, Hixkissville, Ga.

Miss Bruce writes as follows on her subject "Why I Desire to Attend a Summer Camp":

"If I were asked why I wish to go to Heaven, a place I have never seen, I think I would say, 'Because I have been told that it's a perfectly wonderful place.' I would give the same answer to the question of a summer camp."

"I have an auntie who is an enthusiastic camper—goes camping every summer—in fact, I believe she just lives from one camping season until the next—and she never runs down on the subject."

"And this is what she says: 'I wish that every girl might have the opportunity of attending a summer camp every year, if possible, but at least for a season. A well-organized camp is the only place that can develop a girl physically, mentally, morally and socially—and make a grand frolic of it all.' (She puts the physical improvement first for health is her pet hobby.)"

"She tells me that camps are always in such beautiful nature-spots that the campers just want to stay out-of-doors all the time and join in the play—and all the playing is under the direction of trained directors, making it both a pleasure and a profit. Each day is like a grand picnic, with the 'tummy-ache' left out for 'moderation in all things' is a camp rule."

"The prizes to be awarded are numerous and handsome and all the present will be allowed to draw for 1,000-pound ice ticket book which has been contributed by the Atlantic & Coast corporation."

Fruit punch will be served during the game without extra charge a delicious home-made confections will be on sale at moderate prices. Those not having reservations of secure them at the door."

Mrs. J. C. Gentry, general chairman, requests all attending to bring cards and pencils.

Easiest Way to Remove Ugly Hairy Growth

(Beauty Culture)

Here is a method for removing hair from arms, neck or face that is unfasting and is quite inexpensive. Mix thick paste with some powdered deodorant and water and spread on hair surface. After 2 or 3 minutes, rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. No harm or inconvenience results from this method, but be careful to get genuine delatone and mix fresh as wanted. THE VITAL FLAME

BY MAY CHRISTIE

A Stirring Serial of Primitive Passions

CHAPTER LXX
"I Believe In You."

"Is Leonie staying here?" Marcel asked.

"Oh yes," Lady Warrington answered, "she came down for the week
and whenever she knows that Mr.
Fleming will be here, if you don't let him off, I'm sure she'd have had him try for her, even though she is engaged to that handsome young fellow. That affair's been simmering down of late."

"Is she in her room just now?"
Marcella spoke in a detached manner,
she thought for the sake of saying nothing.

"Yes, we haven't awakened her though I went in twice. She had a bad headache last night, and I gave her aspirin. I expect that nosey captain of police will be on her door in a few minutes, but she's been roused pretty soon."

She handed Marcella a cup of coffee.

"Drink that, dear. It will warm
you up. You look like a ghost."

Yes, it was a shame about the money. No doubt the girl was suffering the tortures of the damned, in contemplating that she should miss and by a hair's breadth, too. Life was a cruel joke.

Lady Warrington expressed these sentiments to the white-faced girl, but was rather disconcerted when the latter turned on her, exclaiming—
"Put such a thought out of your mind forever! For months I've had the very thought of Warwick Fleming's money. It's been like an octopus—dragging me down,
and down—"

She broke off on a smothered sob
as behind Lady Warrington appeared the captain of police.

"I wish you hadn't said that darling," said Lady Warrington later to Marcella. "The man heard you, and I'm sure he jotted it down in his notebook. He's all over the place, eavesdropping."

"I don't care what anybody hears," rejoined the girl wearily. Her thoughts, when she could drag them from the horror lying upstairs where it had fallen, were all on Miles. How would it go with him at the inquest?
He was sensitive and highly-strung.
Publicity would hit him very hard.
(Notoriety was the word, and not publicity.)

He wasn't guilty. No, of course not.

But that distraught air? His wild aspect on returning from The Larches? His entreaties that the pair should fly together, and immediately?

Had Warwick threatened him,
and Miles shot in self-defense? Had Miles lost his temper, and in a fit of rage discharged the weapon?
The shooting had been an accident?

Leonie Day, pale but composed, appeared in an elaborate kimono. At the order of the captain of police,
Graves had awakened her.

"It's the most shocking thing I ever heard of," she looked long and searchingly at Marcella. "Where were you at the time of the—
the murder?"

A little wave of angry color crept into Marcella's cheeks. She

When Hearts Command

BY ELIZABETH YORK
MILLER

"But it's quite natural, I've gone completely off my head if it had happened to me."

"Yes, it was natural, come to think of it."

"And what a nice nature he's got.
Thinking at once of presents for us."

"Twice Alice had said 'Poor Uncle John'! Would it be too risky to ask her why she thought of him as an object of pity? Since that night when she had asked her incredible questions, Alice had avoided personal reference to Uncle John. So had her mother."

Just the one word "madhouse," or
the suspicion of it as focusing in Hugo's past, might have altered the whole situation. Alice was so terribly conscientious. She would have been insistent upon being told how it might affect herself, since madness runs in families. O, there had been so many near shaves, and even now when everything—including Alice's suspicions—seemed lulled into security, an upset might occur: at the last moment, at the very altar, Alice knew her daughter, Alice knew her iron and even love, it self, would not shake her convictions as to right and wrong.

They drew closer together with their arms around each other, and two handkerchiefs were being used quite openly and freely.

"Yes, perhaps," Jean gulped.

"But I want you, too. I'll have Philip, but I can't do without my mother. You see how selfish I am.
If I thought I'd have to do without you—"

"O, you won't! Yes, yes, I'll come to England. I must, I must, you particularly—in case—"

Old-fashioned Jean blushed, faltered,
and broke off self-consciously.

But Alice was of the generation which looked at the face set in the picture and sees no reason to make secrets of its laws.

"Yes, if I have a child—children
—I'd want you, mummy, and I'd want you, mummy, and I'd want you, mummy, and I'd want you, mummy."

"I can't realize it—that it may be possible. Why, you're only a baby yourself!"

Alice laughed gently.

"O, no! I'm really and truly grown up, mummy, dear. But you are a grandmother! That would seem odd."

"I don't see why."

"You're so young."

"Well, I don't know that we ought to discuss such things. You aren't even married yet. It doesn't seem quite—quite—"

"O, darling, how funny you are!"
Alice laughed heartily now. "Why,
Philip discusses them."

"Not with you!" Mrs. Carney was horrified.

"Yes, with me, mummy, darling."

"But—"

"After all, I'm the person he should discuss them with."

"But—"

"He talked so beautifully, it simply made me want to weep."

"How do you mean? What could he have said? Really, Alice—"

"All about the great responsibility of parenthood. How nobody, no intelligent man or woman, had any right to bring children into the world unless they could guarantee them a clean bill of health—mental and physical."

Jean shivered. "I can not under-

me."

the girl he's going to marry," she said.

But Alice was unperturbed by this criticism.

"Phillips is a doctor," she reminded her mother. "He sees a great deal of the misery that—that parents do inflict upon their children merely by bringing them into the world."

"My dear, those things are—are better left to a Higher Being."

"I don't believe," Alice said somberly, "that leaving things to chance is the same thing as leaving them to God."

"O, no—I don't mean that," Mrs.
Carney agreed hastily. "Still, this eugenist business can be carried too far."

THREE AUTO CONCERNS ARE PLANNING MERGER

Winton, Haines and Dorris Companies May Soon Become One Organization.

Cleveland, May 21.—Officers and directors of the Winton company, Cleveland automobile makers, have formally recommended to stockholders that a plan to merge the Winton company with the Haines Automobile company, of Kokomo, Indiana, and the Dorris Motor Car company, of St. Louis, be adopted, and for the purpose of ratifying the proposal called an official meeting of stockholders, to be held June 4, at the company's offices.

Officials of the Haines company have already made a similar recommendation, and stockholders of that company will meet next Friday in Kokomo to take action. The Dorris company is understood to be favorable to the plan and it is understood to be a foregone conclusion that the contemplated merger will take place
in a short time.

A new company, with an estimated capitalization of around $19,000,000,
to be called the Consolidated Motors corporation, is to take over the assets, good will, etc., of the three companies and operate all the plants under the new charter. There will be a decided change in the official line-up,
it is believed by officials of the company, although none is able to say at this time as to what present officers and directors will be retained, and which will go.

There is to be no interruption of the output of Winton, Haines and Dorris automobiles, but the Winton Engines, which makes the motors for the Winton automobile, will specialize thereafter more intelligently on a marine engine it has developed, according to Secretary
Brown.

Mrs. Omar Elder Is Hostess.

Mrs. Omar F. Elder was hostess
at a bridge-luncheon Monday at her home on Muscogee avenue, in honor of Miss Bessie Culley, of San Francisco, the guest of Mrs. Clarence Coppedge.

The rooms were artistically decorated with flowers from the garden of the hostess.

The honor guest was presented a deck of playing cards. The top score and consolation prizes were hand-embroidered guest towels.

Miss Culley wore a gown of cinnabar colored flat crepe embroidered with bronze beads and worn with a brown hat.

Mrs. Elder was gowned in yellow crepe.

The guests included the members of Mrs. Elder's bridge club and a few close friends.

SHRINERS PAY HONOR TO CAPTAIN WILLIAMS

Washington, D. C., May 21.—(Special.)—Captain Cranston Williams, of Greensboro, Ga., secretary to United States Senator William J. Harris, has been appointed an aide on the parole and patrol committee for the Shriners' session in Washington on June 5, 6 and 7. It was announced today. He is a Shriner and will assist in handling visitors for the official events of the three days' meeting here.

Crew Street P-T. A. Will Meet Wednesday.

The regular monthly meeting of the Crew Street P-T. A. will be held at the school auditorium, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Election of

Beau Rand

BY CHARLES ALDEN SELTZER

Next Week, "The Shadow of the Sheltering Pines."
BY GRACE MILLER WHITE

It was dark when Compton rode up to the camp of the Bar 8 outfit, found Amos Seddon and told him of his daughter having met and liked Beau Rand. Rand's piece of news which angered Seddon. But angry as he was, he would not listen to Compton's suggestion that he have a father's revenge by killing Rand. Both had seen their neighbor angry two or three times and neither cared to face him in combat. But Compton had not exhausted his ideas.

"He's riding a black horse, brand-new with the Bar 8," he said. "Where did he get it?"

"Bought it from Mellert—my range boss. That black Midget was an outlaw, an' I told Mellert to get rid of him. So he sold him to Rand, an' Rand broke him, makin' the best horse in the country out of him—damn him!"

"Did Mellert give him a bill of sale?"

"No," snapped Seddon; "what you gettin' at?"

"Gettin' at Rand," said Compton shortly. "You back my play and we'll frame him. I'll fix it with the sheriff tonight."

Shortly before midnight, Compton rode into Ocala and went to the Elgin saloon and dance hall, where he found Sheriff Webster.

"We've got the goods on Beau Rand," he whispered in Webster's ear.

"The hell you have!" said the sheriff. He was surprised, and he tried to get some enthusiasm into his voice. But the color left his face, and his eyes dropped to a glass on the table in front of him. He fingered it nervously as he listened to Compton, who continued to talk.

Later the sheriff got up and went out, returning after a few minutes with a tall, slender, cruel-faced man, whom he introduced as "Slim" Kinney. The man wore two guns, both swung low at his hips. There was a hard, cynical light in his eyes as he looked at Compton.

"Slim's been achin' to join us for quite a spell," said Webster. "Down Bernalillo way—where Slim's been hangin' out—things has been gettin' pretty hot for him; them havin' no sheriff whose views is as broad as mine. He's allowin' he'd admire to be one of my deputies—an' he'd admire to have the job of salivatin' Beau Rand. I reckon we ain't objectin'."

Kinney dropped into a chair, and Compton ordered drinks. And while the three men sat there over the bottles and glasses they talked long and earnestly; their voices rising toward the end as the liquor in the bottle slowly vanished.

Compton might have worried a little had he known what happened in the Elgin saloon immediately after he went out. For a tall, gracefully built girl, with dark hair and black, lustrous eyes, which were flashing with passion, had been watching Compton and the others leave the room. During all the time that Compton and the others had sat at their table, the girl had been sitting in the dance hall, pretending to watch the dancers, but in reality listening to the conversation carried on between the three men.

At first she had been merely tired, and had leaned her head against the thin board partition that separated the barroom from the dance hall. But when she heard Compton's voice, and Webster's—and later Kinney's—she had pressed an ear hard against the partition and despite the noise, she had heard much—especially during the lulls in the dancing.

She got up now, hurried to her room and swiftly changed to riding garments. She paused in the upper hall, listening; then went rapidly to the far end of the passage and ran down an outside stairway.

In the somber shadows of the building she paused again, to peer around the corner nearest her. Then, seeing no one, she ran to a stable up the rear of the building, and came out leading a pony. At once she galloped away from town, and within half an hour was pounding on the front door of the Three Bar ranch-house.

Shortly the door opened and Rand stood on the threshold looking at her; starkly dressed, his feet bare, a heavy pistol in his right hand.

"Lucia Morell!" he exclaimed when he saw her. And then he was out on the porch gripping one of her arms, and peering closely at her, for he saw the excitement in her eyes.

"What's up?" he demanded.

"Plenty, Rand," she said, her breath coming fast. "Link Compton is planning to kill you! Tonight I heard them talking about you. It's about that black horse of yours—Midnight! They say you stole him. Amos Seddon has charged him with it. And tonight Link Compton came to town and told Webster. They're not going to arrest you—they're going to shoot you! They've hired a gunfighter named Slim Kinney. They've deputized him, and they're going to wait until you come to town. Then they'll kill you, and say you resisted arrest!"

Rand found it difficult to thank Lucia, especially when she told him she had ridden to him solely because she loved him. That statement he took at much less than its face value, as he felt she had acted rather because she had quarrelled with Compton.

But no matter what the reason, Rand knew this was the hour for action. He hurried the girl on her way back to town, then rode to the Bar 8, where he was waiting by the stable when Amos Seddon galloped in from his camp—coming to see that Eleanor had no more to do with Rand.

So great was the tension that held Seddon that he had flung his hands upward when Rand spoke:

"Conscience, eh? I was wonderin' if you had any. It's the first time you've showed it. Rand grinned cocklely. "I reckon you're fussed up about that outlaw horse Mellert sold me—Midnight. Recollect him, eh? Well, when I bought Midnight from Mellert I clean forgot to get a bill of sale for him. I'm takin' it now!"

Seddon gulped and cleared his throat before he could speak. He feared Rand, but he also feared Link Compton's wrath. "Mellert sold him to you," he said:

"It's up to Mellert to fix up a receipt for the money you paid him. Rand's eyes narrowed to glittering pin points; he grinned feebly and lowered his hands, so that the fingers brushed the butts of his pistols. And his answer came sharply, viciously:

"I'm wantin' that bill of sale right now. You an' me are goin' to conclude a business deal accordin' to fair an' square rules. You're precedin' in there before you do your scribblin'—the mouners will be on the job pronto. Mosey along, you polecat!"

For an instant Seddon hesitated. Then he turned and without a word began to walk toward the ranchhouse, Rand closely behind him.

Convinced of the utter futility of resistance, Seddon did not hesitate when he reached the office—which was entered through a door that opened from the porch. Inside, he sat at a little, flat-topped desk and wrote:

"Received from Beau Rand one hundred and twenty-five dollars as payment in full for a black outlaw horse, named Midnight."

"Now date it," ordered Rand. "Make it the 25th of March. That's now," he added as he folded the paper and stuck it in a pocket. "I reckon that squares us—on that deal."

But Rand did not go. He told Seddon that for that day he was not to leave the ranchhouse or see any of his men; that particularly he was not to let Compton or the sheriff know he had given a bill of sale for Midnight. And before he left Rand would hear him tell Eleanor he had been mistaken in his estimate of his neighbor, that he really was not an outlaw. Seddon protested weakly, but in the end did what he was told. Whereupon Rand told Eleanor he hoped she would visit the Three Bar frequently, that "Aunt Betsy an' Uncle Ephraim an' Bud could entertain you right royal."

"Aunt Betsy and Uncle Ephraim and Bud," she said. "They sound good, don't they?"

"They're all wool an' a yard wide," he stated, his eyes glowing. "My mother's sister an' her husband. They was with me in Durango—after my folks died; an' they've been with me since."

"And Bud?"

He regarded her steadily. "Bud is an orphan," he said. "His mother is dead, an' his father didn't feel responsible enough to take care of him. I'm tickled to do it. Bud's a hum-dinger, ma'am," he added with an enthusiastic leap in his voice; "he's the greatest kid that ever struck this neck of the woods. An' he ain't got no faults—harrin' cussin'!"

"Cussin'!" she betrayed her amazement with a blush and a startled look at him. "Do you mean that he curses?"

"Some," he grinned. "I can't coax it out of him. He don't cuss nothin' except what he's told. Whereupon the boys teach him when I ain't around. An' he's so smart that he picks them out of him—then swears words. I mean—if I thought I could!"

"Oh, don't do that!" she objected. "I'm sure it wouldn't do any good! Why don't you try to shame him! Can't Aunt Betsy do something—or Uncle Ephraim?"

"They've done all they can, I reckon. He just won't listen. I'm a heap scared that if somethin' ain't done he'll turn into a pirate or some-din', ma'am. An' I've thought, since you come home, that maybe if you'd ride over once in a while you'd be able to teach him better manners. It would sure be a shame to let him grow up to be a cussin', swaggin' pirate."

"Well, I certainly shall come over," she declared.

Rand rode away, far out into a broad basin on his ranch, to find Larry Redford, his range boss and friend. To him he told the story of the plot against him and said he was going at once into Ocala to face Slim Kinney. He had but one request to make.

"You folks git back in the car cos when I git leverage under they winder and she statts stuck it allus turns the car over if she is empty."

CHAPTER IV.
Kinney, cool and saturnine, had breakfasted early and was idling on the sunny side of the street when Rand rode into the town. Suddenly he heard a voice behind him—a hoarse, low whisper:

"He is coming!"

He turned to see Compton standing in a doorway at his back, grinning evilly and stepped out toward the hitching rail that skirted the sidewalk. And then a voice floating to Kinney from a point near where the black horse had halted, greeted the rider hilariously:

"Hello, Rand—you ol' son-of-a-gun!" Kinney grinned sneeringly at the greeting. But the rider of the black horse came on again, heading the animal to the hitching rail in front of the Elgin saloon—where he dismounted. For an instant he stood, looking down the street. Then he walked toward Kinney. Outwardly Rand was coolly deliberate, and no man watching him as he walked toward Kinney—noting the faint, mirthless smile on his face—would have divined that he had come to town to kill a man. Nor did Kinney, watching him with furtive alertness, see anything in Rand's manner to warn him that the man was aware of the plot to kill him. For there was in Rand's eyes as he reached Kinney nothing but a gleam of casual inquiry. At least, so it seemed to the gunfighter.

Rand seemed about to pass Kinney—and the gunfighter did not intend to molest Rand yet—for he was in no hurry—when he halted within a step of Kinney and said, slowly, his gaze meeting the gunfighter's, and holding it:

"Seen Webster around?" Kinney's lips curved into a cold sneer. He had meant to delay, in order to talk Rand—to note the peculiarities of his movements, anything that would indicate the probable speed with which he could get his guns out.

But Rand's question had provided him with an opportunity he sought and he could see no reason why he should not get the thing over with as quickly as possible. Therefore, as he sneered, he backed away slightly, to give himself room to draw his guns.

His hands went to his hips as he edged slightly sideways in the backward movement; and into his eyes came the merciless, sardonic glint that told, more eloquently than words of the bitter lust in his heart.

New York, May 21.—An early advance in today's cotton market seemed largely the result of covering by old crop shorts. July sold up to 25.58 or 45 points net higher and an early high ground for the recovery of about 2 1/2 cents per pound from recent low levels. The strength of this position pulled the new crop up several points, but after the more urgent demand for July had been supplied, prices eased off owing to reports of continued weakness in the stock market and better weather prospects. July sold down to 25.35, and closed at 25.61, with the general market closing steady at a net advance of 21 points to a decline of 8 points. New crop positions being generally seven to eight points lower. The market opened steady at an advance of 6 to 22 points on covering and buying believed to be for Japanese accounts. There was scattered southern selling which caused some irregularity right after the call but the tone soon turned firmer on covering by near month shorts, complaints of showers or rains in the eastern belt, and expectations that the price of July contracts was over. Old crop months sold 21 to 45 points net higher on this advance, with May touching 25.27 and the new crop worked 16 to 29 points net higher, with October selling at 23.20. The flurry of demand for July then subsided however and the market was rather nervous and unsettled during the afternoon owing to unfavorable reports from the stock market, the outlook for better weather in the eastern belt and rumors that a prominent southwestern firm estimated the condition of the Texas crop at 75 compared with 61 at the end of May last year and 71 two years ago. Last prices were 13 to 24 points off from the close of the previous day. The market was generally lower for the day in the late trading, with October selling at 23.98. Post receipts today were 4,355 bales. United States port stocks, 410,613. Exports 4,607, making 4,376,739 so far this season.

HEAVY ADVANCES

Announcement of Big Decrease in Visible Supply in U. S. Influences Advance in Prices.

Chicago, May 21.—Influenced chiefly by unfavorable crop reports and by announcement of a big decrease in the United States' visible supply, the wheat market scored something of an advance in price today. Closing quotations were unsettled at 3.8 to 3.4 cent net gain, July 1.16 1/4 to 1.16 3/4 and September 1.14 1/4 to 1.14 3/4. Corn finished at a range varying from 1.01 cent to 1.8 to 1.4 cent advance, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents higher.

Reports at hand indicate a wider area of wheat impairment in the southwest than had heretofore been generally believed probable. Some of the counties of largest production in Kansas were pictured as being devastated at rapid rate, and there were also advices that parts of Oklahoma were showing equally at a disadvantage. Unfavorable reports from Ohio, Indiana and Illinois were likewise of special notice. On the other hand, weakness of stocks led at times to downturns in wheat values, and so too did selling to realize profits.

Rallies to the highest prices of the day in the wheat market took place after it was known that the domestic visible supply showed a falling off of 4,107,000 bushels. The unusual size of the decrease was explained by the fact that the export clearance of wheat and four last week amounted to more than 5,500,000 bushels. Buying power, however, was apparently insufficient to make the bulge last, and the market was again in the exchange session came to an end.

Corn and oats were mainly governed by the action of wheat values. Rains in Nebraska and elsewhere likely to delay corn planting were helpful to the bulls.

Buying on the part of small packers gave firmness to the provision market after a decline due to lower quotations on hogs.
